Categories

AcroDance: The fusion of acrobatic content with dance elements, focusing on the blend of making acrobatics 50% of the routine and dance 50% of the routine. AcroDance routines show clearly-defined dance elements with the expectation of dance technique throughout transitions. As to be expected in all dance categories, performers should aim to fully utilize the entire stage as much as possible within their performance. Mats are not permitted.

Acrobatics: More traditional acrobatic routines that do not focus on deeply blending acrobatics with dance. The primary focus is acrobatics (approximately 80%) and dance elements are a more secondary component (20%) and, therefore, Acrobatics routines may not travel the stage as much as AcroDance routines do. Acrobatics routines may have a similar style to sport acro or may have a slightly more gymnastics feel. This is an appropriate category for Gymnastics-based displays. Thin strip mats are permitted.

Acro Open: An acrobatics-style routine that combines many acrobatic/dance/circus disciplines; therefore, classifying better under an open category. Tap shoes, singing, and floor mats are permitted.

Contortion: A showcase of flexibility elements composed into a routine. Mats are not permitted.

Tumbling Showcase: A routine comprised primarily of tumbling and stunting elements with choreographic features that are secondary to the overall performance. This is a suitable category for Gymnastics-based displays. Thin strip mats are permitted.

Adagio: A partner category specifically designed to showcase overhead lifts and partner balances. An adagio routine demonstrates strength, flexibility and balance but does not necessarily need to travel the entire use of the stage as would be expected in an AcroDance category. Mats are not permitted.

Hand Balancing: A routine composed primarily of hand balancing elements that may or may not be performed on rods or blocks. Mats are not permitted.

Aerial Hoop/Ring (freestanding): An aerial hoop routine in which the performer spends 50% or more of the routine suspended from a freestanding aerial prop. The prop does not have a base directly below the anchor point. The hoop may be two-point attachment or single-point with spinning permitted as preferred by the choreographer. A small mat is permitted under the prop.

Hoop Lollipop/Lyra Aerial Ring/or Weggsphere (freestanding): An Aerial hoop/ring-style routine in which the performer spends at least 50% of the routine on a Lollipop or Weggsphere style prop. A small mat is permitted under the prop. In this routine the base of the prop is often used choreographically.

Aerial Silks/Fabric/Tissue (freestanding): An aerial routine performed on silks/fabric/tissue in which the performer spends 50% or more of the routine on a freestanding prop rigged with silks/fabric/tissue. A small mat is permitted under the prop.

Aerial Trapeze (freestanding): An aerial trapeze routine in which the performer spends 50% or more of the routine on a stationary trapeze or a aerial cube. A small mat is permitted under the prop.

Aerial Cube (freestanding): An aerial cube routine in which the performer spends 50% or more of the routine on an aerial cube suspended from a freestanding rig. A small mat is permitted under the prop.

Aerial Open (freestanding): An open aerial routine in which the performer uses an aerial device not already listed in an alternative category such as straps, hammock or custom creations such as spiral, sail, heart, square or other. A small mat is permitted under the prop.

Object Manipulation & Juggling: An entertaining routine focussed around object manipulation or juggling infused with Acrobatic and variety elements. Tap shoes, singing or speaking is permitted. Mats are not permitted.

Open Circus: A performance that does not easily fall into any of the above alternative categories featuring content originating from circus-based disciplines or acrobatics including but not limited to German Wheel, Cyr, or other circus apparatus. Small mats are permitted under any free-standing props.

Rule of the Dynasty will become an Acrobatic Arts
Ambassador and will win a masterclass
for their studio.
